

Presenting Community Qualitative Data

A Case study of the Moray Collective Voice Visualiser

Haiyin Xu

Notes before start

- This talk includes real quotes from community members, covering mental health, isolation and addiction.
- All data is public.
- Collective Voice was developed through Collaboration for Mental Wealth in Moray.
- Materials are shared with permission.

How to visualise hundreds of quotes like this?

"Loneliness and boredom leads to drinking for some.
Goes out for company but the social circle are drinkers so hard to break away.
Would be sitting in the house all the time.
Isolation, loneliness, lack of confidence and self-worth."

In a research report, this usually becomes one of three things.

A number

"23 people mentioned loneliness"

A paraphrase

"Participants described social isolation as a barrier to reducing alcohol use."

Why qualitative data is harder to visualise?

Quantitative: Research 40 years ago

We can rank encodings because there is a right answer.

Qualitative: Research 6 years ago (later shown to have no significant effect))

7 potential dimensions summarised from case studies of (only) 105 popular visuals.

Living/lived experiences in mental health, alcohol/drugs & more

Covering Oct 2025 - Mar 2026

Selected quotes from community members

- "I felt my lived experience was welcomed by medical professionals and they really listened to my perspective."
- "Taking care of my mother meant that I missed out on so much, I lost my social life."
- "Some staff really get it, but others you feel judged the moment you walk in."
- "It's that 1000 phone calls you have to make to get somewhere."
- "These recovery events and community spaces remind you you're not alone. It gives you hope and a sense of belonging."

This report shares stories from people in our community about using local services. Some parts talk about tough topics like unfair treatment and difficult experiences, which might be upsetting. Please read carefully, take breaks if needed, and talk to someone you trust if you feel upset.

Overview

Since 2022 the Moray Drug and Alcohol (MADP), and Moray Health and Social Care Partnership (HSCM) until April 2024, have resourced Moray Wellbeing Hub (MWH) to support the vital role of lived and living experience in the ongoing delivery and development of local services. This resource is used in parallel with direct funding MWH has leveraged for active citizenship, self-management and peer-research, with the ambition of making lived and living experience core to delivery of improving the mental health of Moray.

This aim is to gather collective voice in Moray around mental health and drug and alcohol recovery supports and services, placing MWH as a 'critical friend' to statutory services and aiding evaluation of delivery. Since February 2023, this information is then shared directly through HSCM and MADP to partners via a bi-monthly collective voice report and verbally in strategic groups. In 2024, steering partners moved to include Community Justice and the reach of the reports widened further. Alongside these strategic reports, the ambition was to also create a version for use by the public via the MWH website. This is the fifth of these reports.

Categories for these quotes - CHIME

CHIME is a recovery framework used to understand wellbeing through five domains (Leamy et al., 2011):

- Connection – feeling supported and less alone
- Hope & Optimism – believing change is possible
- Identity – sense of self and dignity
- Meaning – purpose and belonging
- Empowerment – choice and influence over life
- Green indicates positive; Orange indicates areas for improvement.

Exploratory Design 1 — A lens for policymakers

- Track change over time
- This view was NOT selected to be part of the final design.

Exploratory Design 3 — A lens for partners

- Create consistent, reproducible views for partners.
- The source data was not originally tagged with PANEL, so I used a correspondence table to map it to the five domains.
- This view was selected but the sentiment bar and figures were removed.

What is Collective Voice?

How did the website eventually turn out?

<https://cv.mentalwealthmoray.org.uk/>

Workshops — Community and Partners

- Community members immediately understood and connected with the idea.
- They also offered detailed, actionable suggestions.
- “I can really see what this wants to achieve.”
- “I will use it like [this] , so if you can add [that] ...”

Workshops — Policy Makers

- The purpose and intended audience were less immediately clear.
- “Who is the audience?”
- “Maybe I am too old...”

Changes after the workshops

- Made clickable and non-clickable elements easier to distinguish
- Added bookmarking
- Added copy-and-paste with source attribution

The Public Launch

- Strong engagement
- We received many new suggestions, although the feedback was broader and less focused than in the workshops.
- “Why don’t we add searching/this filter to every page?”
- “Can I export a report?”

What did I learn?

When there is no “Best Practice”, the design has to provide orientation.

Even with four different lenses, some users were still unsure who the website was for or where to begin. In response, we added a Start Here page and an FAQ.

Next Steps

- Backend development has begun.
- I recently confirmed the database structure with the Moray team.
- Moray is considering replacing its six-monthly reports with the website.
